Vincent Van Gogh: The short square little fellow, who was called the little painter man by the farmers. His weather-beaten and tanned face was defined by a somewhat red and bristly little beard. He had very few friends, almost always living alone. His teachers and peers thought little of him.

After years of obsessing over the colors black and grey, Vincent finally discovered: color on upper winds notes, black and grey flags pop up and disappear from sideline ripple of flags along sideline of solid bright colors, moving then out to field quickly and then something more amazing: He could paint!
